

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A mobile telephone wherein button covers can be variably changed includes a telephone body with a button portion, and interchangeable button covers detachably fixable to the telephone body can be a bar type cover, a flip type cover or a sliding lid type cover. The bar type cover includes a frame removably mounted on the telephone body where the frame removably mounted on the telephone body where the frame covers the button portion and keypads provided on one side of the frame and which interlocks with the telephone key buttons of the button portion. The flip type cover includes a frame detachably attached to the telephone body, where the cover is hingedly connected to the frame for exposing the button portion by pivoting the flip type cover into an open position. The sliding type cover includes a frame detachably attached to the telephone body where the cover is connected to the frame that allows the cover to slide to expose the button portion by a sliding action.